EXCLUSIVE KEISUKE ITAGAKI INTERVIEW

SPECIALLY DONE FOR THE WILD FANG PROJECT BY ALEX SMITH

KEISUKE IKEGAKI INTERVIEW

Who is the character that touched you the most?

The mother of Baki Akezawa Emi, is the most touching character

—Please tell us if there is a character who acted on its own?
ITAGAKI I can say the answer is main characters All regular characters are so It's easy to make stories When I start working, I can see my work with a distance

-Thinking about it, the mother of Baki, Akezawa Emi, is the most touching character of all because her character acted on its own

ITAGAKI I let her go through the mill as I decided that she became a suitable mother at the end of the fight between Baki and Yuujiro But even now I have a feeling that I didn't write the action that she took as a mother to protect Baki, which is the feeling that Emi acted on her will

—The end of Emiwas that she awoke to the motherhood, stood up against Yujiro, and got killed but this episode was decided from the beginning?
ITAGAKI I haven t decided how she becomes a mother but if she stands up against Yujiro and hits the face, this means she determines the death of herself So I was hesitating about writing that scene
—That means you didn t decide until the last moment how you were going to end the story?
ITAGAKI At that moment, the deadline was just around the corner, and if I put a totally different picture in the space where Emi tried to hit Yuujiro she still could go on with life Of course I could have chosen this story I held my hand when I realized that my writing the scene of hitting him meant Emi was going to die
I remember I was alone in my room for a while and I finished that scene if I was making a serious decision That s why I still remember very well I couldn't help crying at that moment
—The death of EMI must have been a very touching moment for you
ITAGAKI It was the most touching moment in my career as a creator and I still regret that this scene wasn't something happy, such as a birth of something or an accomplishment

P117

But this is all about making a story And I realized I can expenence feelings and sensations while I am making a story I was an apprentice to Mr Kazuo Koike (Crying Freeman,Lone wolf & cub) who said that the characters live in the story, and I always think they do live and try to let them live, but at that moment I really thought they do live in the story The death of Emi gave me a deep wound or feeling as if I lost somebody I care about so much
Generally, it takes long time to invent names (titles) or story but when I was writing several episodes on Emi's death, everything seemed to finish within short time The very same evening after finishing my work, I came up with the name (title) So much I could get into the story, but I had a feeling that it wasn't my will but the story made me fall for It was a totally special and unique experience

(So what do you think the interview will continue in the future)

For the record: I almost killed myself working on this week's release, two books in two weeks is a great deal, so the next release will be in april 20th
